For the 10th year, students in the Interior Design program at the ASU Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts' School of Design Innovation began their senior year learning about victims of domestic abuse through a partnership with the City of Phoenix Family Advocacy Center, an organization that provides comprehensive services to victims of domestic and sexual violence, homicide, and other violent crimes.

Inspired by stories of the Family Advocacy Center's (FAC) success helping women and families begin new lives free from abuse, the students seek inspiration from an artist or artistic movement to design a chair that reflects what they have learned through the FAC. Eight designs were developed by teams of three or four student designers who collaborate, construct, and present their chairs for judging. The challenge is to design and build the chairs in only five weeks, and all are one of a kind. Representatives of the International Interior Design Association Southwest Chapter judge the chairs and choose one winning chair for a scholarship award.

The chairs will be on display in the Phoenix City Hall atrium from March 29 to April 8 and offered for live and silent auction at a reception featuring hors d'oeuvres and beverages at the Phoenix Art Museum on April 8 for the "CHAIRity" event to benefit the City of Phoenix Family Advocacy Center. Individual tickets are $125 and sponsorships and ticket packages are available.
